Alexander Clark is a Visiting Research Fellow in CLASP (Centre for linguistic theory and studies in probability) at the University of Gothenburg. Before that he taught in the Department of Philosophy at King's College London; and in the Computer Science department of Royal Holloway, University of London. His first degree was in Mathematics from the University of Cambridge, and his Ph.D. is from the University of Sussex. He did postdoctoral research at the University of Geneva. His research is interdisciplinary and lies in the intersection between unsupervised learning in computational linguistics, and theoretical and mathematical linguistics. His most recent book "Empiricism and Language Learnability" with Nick Chater, John Goldsmith and Andy Perfors was published by OUP.